

'1 punch' boy jailed

A BOY of 15 who killed a Polish man with a single punch after laughing about his English was yesterday jailed for three years.

Factory worker Arkadiusz Jozwik, 40, suffered a fractured skull and brain injuries after being hit from behind by the youth in Harlow, Essex.

The yob, who is now 16 but cannot be named, had denied manslaughter but was found guilty at Chelmsford court.

MAY: BOYCOTT STOLE ALL MY TUPPERWARE

PM..with hubby & Boycott

By STEVE HAWKES, Deputy Political Editor

THERESA May watched England's cricket stars yesterday and joked how Geoffrey Boycott once nicked her Tupperware.

She was quizzed by BBC Radio's Test Match Special and took along home-made brownies.

The cricket fan revealed it was not the first time she had brought treats for the radio team.

Mrs May, with hubby Philip, said: "I've made brownies for TMS before, once when Geoffrey Boycott was invited."

"I handed them to Geoffrey but don't know whether they ever made it into the TMS box."

"All I will say is that Geoffrey Boycott's still got my Tupperware."

She also revealed her irritation at being branded "robotic" during the election campaign.

She said: "I get frustrated that people used the term about me."

"I don't think I'm in the least robotic."

The PM has previously hailed famously dogged former batsman Boycott as her childhood hero.

Yesterday she said she admired him because "he stuck in there and just got on with the job".

Last year he predicted she would be as famous as Margaret Thatcher.

But the PM insisted in her BBC 5 Live interview: "I'm Theresa May. I do things my way. The circumstances of Government are different."

She touched on several topics in her 20-minute interview. They ranged from her horror at the 2007 murder of Pakistan leader Benazir Bhutto, who introduced her to Philip, to her hopes for the North Korea crisis.

ON FUTURE: "I'm not a quitter. There's a job to be done. I and the Government are getting on and doing it."

ON 'ROBOT' SLURS: "I'm not being a robot. What I really enjoy is getting out there, talking to people, hearing from them, understanding what the issues are for them."

ON BOYCOTT: "The whole point was he stuck at it. He had a plan, he got on with it and more often than not delivered."

ON DUCKING QUESTIONS: "You are answering the question but you may not be giving the answer the interviewer wants. There's a difference."

ON N KOREA: "I believe that Donald Trump will take the decisions that are right for security and safety around the world. He has very good advisers."

DOWNING TREATS

MRS May shows off her home-made brownies which she baked following a recipe from TV cook Nigel Slater.

She said on BBC Radio 5 Live: "Made by my own fair hands."

Taking along treats is a traditional gesture by Test Match Special guests.

PM'S BROWNIES from Nigel Slater book

300g sugar	1 egg yolk
250g softened butter	60g plain flour
250g good chocolate	60g cocoa powder
3 large eggs, plus	1/2 teaspoon baking powder

Mix sugar and butter till light and fluffy. Add beaten eggs slowly. Add chocolate, half of it melted, half chopped. Fold in sieved flour, cocoa and baking powder. Cook for 25-30 mins in lined 23cm square tin at 180° C or 160° C fan

PM'S IN A STORM

THE PM was criticised for her attitude to Hurricane Irma yesterday.

Speaking when rain had stopped play at England's third Test against the West Indies, cricket-loving Theresa May said: "It is a miserable day but at least we're not in the Caribbean." Lib Dem Alistair

Carmichael said of claims the UK has been slow to send help: "Whilst she watches the cricket the death toll rises in the Caribbean."

The PM later chaired an emergency Cobra committee meeting on the storms. She said our troops had been "working round the clock".
